gravel pathways extend the axis of the home and lead to a woodland walk. The heavily used courtyard between the house and garage acts as the home's primary entrance and outdoor entertaining space. Other features include a small vegetable and cutting garden and a large play space with a perennial border for the family's children and pet. The front of the house (full shade) is planted for textural interest.

CINDY AND JACK Trilica

The severe slope and thick tree canopy provide both the challenge and beauty of this garden. In 1990, when the owners found this naturally forested lot bordered by a creek and ten acres of undeveloped property, they envisioned the privacy of a secluded mountain retreat set in the middle of the city. With a steep elevation change of approximately thirty feet from one side to the other, the mostly shade garden follows the natural look of the property. Jack has gradually constructed a number of hardscapes that create eight rooms in the yard. Cindy has planted a variety of native wild flowers and plants, ferns and hostas, mixed perennials, sedum, herbs, and multiple ground covers and vines to create a lush environment that supports an abundance of birds and wildlife.

The many rooms in the garden include a courtyard in the front of the house that connects to a side yard along the creek, a pond and bog water feature, a woodland walkway connecting a circular stone patio at the back of the property to a private adult tree house at the top of the property, three stone-walled terraces creating large perennial beds, an upper deck, and a greenhouse.

Throughout all seasons of the year, every day is enjoyed sitting, sipping and relaxing in this outdoor oasis.
